AULBACH JOINS YANKEES.

Joe Aulbach, star amateur pitcher on the local lots last year, left Saturday afternoon for Shreveport, where he will join the New York Yankees and endeavor to climb the professional ladder of fame. Joe pitched fourteen straight winning games for St. Xavier's Academy last season and his work in the elimination series was enthusiastically applauded. He is a Louisville boy. In his early boyhood he attended St. Vincent de Paul School on Shelby street. Later, in 1911, he went to St. Xavier's College, on Broadway. He remained there for four years and it was while in attendance at this institution that his baseball ability was brought to light. In 1919 Joe commanded the attention of the baseball fans of the city when he pitched fine ball with the St. Xavier's Alumni team in the Twin City League, but it was not until last year that no team on the local sand lots could wrest a victory from him. Last August, in the St. Xavier-K. and L. game of the local elimination series, at least 5,000 people witnessed his work. Among these was Joe Kelley, New York American scout, who saw Joe immediately after the interesting fifteen-inning 0-to-0 game, had a talk with him and later sent him a contract. After Joe received the contract, on the advice of Brother Benjamin, principal of St. Xavier's, he signed up, and now faces a career which promises to be a most successful one.

MAKE GOOD.

Station and culture in life impose obligations upon their fortunate possessors. The high-born, affluent and educated are expected to be models of conduct for the edification and emulation of their less-favored neighbors. "Noblesse oblige."

If social position imposes obligations upon its holders, with much more reason does the profession of the Catholic faith require the professors to be exemplars of private virtue and public decency, in order that they may avoid giving scandal, and in order that their example may be an influence for good in the community. Religion oblige.

CALLS FOR TRUCE.

The Catholic Woman's Suffrage party, at a great public meeting held in Central Hall, London, passed a resolution calling on the Government to establish a truce of God in Ireland. The resolution was offered by Miss Virginia Crawford, the well known social writer and municipal councillor, who spoke on her recent experiences in Ireland.

BRITISH BOYCOTT FAILURE.

John McCormack, the American tenor, made his first appearance at Monte Carlo since his arrival in Europe three months ago and had a tremendous success, enjoying many encores. Certain English visitors tried to boycott the sale of tickets for his concert at the leading hotels, but failed to influence even the bulk of their own people, and the magnificent Casino Theater was filled with a mixed audience who rapturously applauded the great tenor, whose voice and method alike have improved since he was last heard in London in pre-war days.
